a tonic for volunteers

In Australia, around one third of all residents volunteer their time in some capacity.

In Western Australia alone, volunteers contribute more than $800 million a year worth of labour to the economy.

Recognising this contribution, the Rotary Club of Bunbury Leschenault has established the Club Doctors service to provide an extra level of support to volunteers and not-for-profit organisations, with the support of other Rotary Clubs in Bunbury .

Club Doctors is a free counselling service offering advice to people involved in the region's not-for-profit organisations to help enhance their work.

The service is offered by volunteer counsellors experienced in their fields and is aimed at empowering our community leaders and improving the effectiveness of community organisations.

The service includes advice on:

- effective committees
- growth programs
- conflict resolution
- assistance with financial matters
- volunteer recruitment
- fundraising

The service is available to office-bearers of clubs and not-for-profit organisations who may phone the Club Doctors hotline during business hours to set up a confidential phone conversation or appointment with a counsellor.

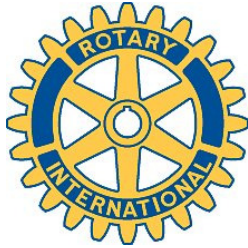

The service provides practical advice on how to solve problems and is not aimed at undertaking work on behalf of community organisations.

Club Doctors is assisted by Volunteer South West through the provision of administration support.

Club Doctors is a Rotary initiative funded by the State Government of Western Australia through the South West Development Commission and supported by Volunteer South West and the Bunbury Mail.
